MCAS '20

Megan Luff, a British international student, graduated from Morrissey College of Arts and Sciences in 2020 with a bachelor's in Environmental Geoscience and a minor in education.

Megan quickly realized her passion for the environment after joining clubs such as Real Food, Ecopledge, and Climate Justice for BC. Megan was also a dedicated intern at the Office of Sustainability which combined her love for collaboration and community, while also tackling local sustainability issues. Reflecting on her time, Megan stated that "The Office of Sustainability has become a second home to me here, where I can focus on my passions and make positive changes to campus."

Megan strongly believes that the environment should be a conversation that goes beyond the walls of our campus in order to inspire real, widespread change. She has continued this path as a master's degree candidate in Environmental Education, and both interns and produces at environmental-centered organizations. Megan was assigned to manage the Tree Campus USA program representing the Office of Sustainability, collaborating with Landscape Services, and was instrumental in creating a platform for tree awareness on our campus.

Also, she collaborated with Allen Li '21 to create a "tree app" to help our campus community locate all of the trees on our campus and identify the type of trees that will help Landscape Services with their inventory of trees on all of our campuses. Megan's work in the office has helped BC question is sustainable position to create a more sustainable campus, and all of us from Facilities Services appreciate her work and wish her well with the next phase of her academic studies.
